Students learn the importance of shellfish and the value of trading important economic goods with other Lenape people. Participants also learn ancient techniques, such as tool making, food preservation, and the creation of dye from berries and wood. Participants decorate shells they collect along the beach with home-made dye to take home.

- Portions of this program and your lunch will be conducted outdoors. All students and supervising adults should dress in layers appropriate to the weather and be prepared for light rain. The air temperature at the beach is often much cooler than inland locations, therefore an extra jacket or sweatshirt is recommended.
