Statewide Assessment of Student Achievement

Changing Times

What's new in this issue of Changing Times?

It's a special anniversary for students and parents across the state. For the first time, the Indiana Department of Education is releasing information about the new assessment program to parents. This issue of Changing Times is designed to help you understand the new assessment program, why it was created, and what it means for your child's education. It also includes information about the new assessment program, why it was created, and what it means for your child's education.

Sending him away and installing George Angiano as "Chairman" would completely change the nature of the organization, he said. "I don't want to be a figurehead," he said. "I want to be a participant."

Angiano, 67, is a former executive director of the New York State Department of Agriculture and Markets, where he worked for 20 years. He was the first person to head the department's new Bureau of Food Safety and Inspection, which was created in 1996. He was also the first person to head the department's new Bureau of Food Safety and Inspection, which was created in 1996.

Angiano, who was born in Italy and moved to the United States as a child, has a degree in food science from Cornell University. He has worked for the department since 1996, when he was hired as executive director of the Bureau of Food Safety and Inspection. He was promoted to executive director of the entire department in 2001.
